Mayor Armstrong was not in a very amiable frame of mind this morning over the result of last night's meeting of the city council and he did not mince words in saying that municipal ownership had received a slap at the hands of the aldermen in refusing to second the motion of Alderman McInnis for the appointment of a committee to look into the feasibility of installing a gas plant and distribution system that the city would own and operate. The mayor said that he did not feel that the council was seriously in favor of letting the ratepayers decide whether they wanted municipal gas.

Of the four other aldermen interviewed by the Capital this morning only one declined to make a statement for publication, the exception being Alderman Mould. Alderman Hyndman is absent from the city, while Aldermen Grindley and Miller could not be found. Following are the interviews given.

Prince Edward to Be Formally Invested as Pr. of Wales July 13

Over 150,000 Persons Will Witness Investiture at Carnarvon Castle Tomorrow—Thousands for Decorations

(Western Associated Press)

Carnarvon, Wales, July 12.—Ald Prince and Edward second only to the coronation of King George and Queen Mary, Prince Edward, the seventeen year old son of the British sovereign will be formally invested as the Prince of Wales tomorrow as Prince of Wales. Twenty-five thousand dollars has been donated by the British people to defray the cost of the investiture and other items and the king himself, together with the British government has given almost twice as much to insure the majestic success. Thousands are now gathered in Carnarvon and a conservative estimate places the number of guests at tomorrow's ceremonies at 150,000.

As evidence that this money has been put to good use, Carnarvon Castle is today decorated with a lavish profusion and has brought hordes of admirer visitors to its historic walls. The old court yard where many such ceremonies have been performed since Edward the second was born at the castle six hundred years ago is crowded with colorful swarms with visitors and brightly dressed courtiers. The processions of time upon the ancient walls of masonry have been repaired. The colors of the Royal household and the British empire are flying from all its towers and battlements and even the ivy growing walls have been rendered gay by gaily medley shreds bearing the colors of the various regiments of the British Empire.

Castle Repaired.

Inside the old building no less startling changes have taken place. The dark and dingy rooms have been renovated with countless coats of paint; the ancient battlements have been replaced by lanterns and curtains in exact replica of those removed and leaded windows that have let in the storm of Wales for centuries, have been repaired. Eagle towers have been converted into a magnificent reception room for the king and queen, and here a guard of honor will greet the king and queen upon their arrival at the castle. Gloriously the castle has been less lavishly fitted for the reception of the young prince, who, aided by the chancellor of the exchequer, appointed constable of the tower, and the gentleman of the prince's suite, will here prepare for the ceremony that will complete the official investiture of the prince.

AMALGAMATION PICNIC PRONOUNCED SUCCESS

LARGE CROWD ASSEMBLES IN STRATHCONA EXHIBITION PARK TO WITNESS BASEBALL GAMES AND PROGRAMME OF GENERAL SPORTS

Strathcona, July 12.—Favored with fine weather and with a good attendance the big amalgamation picnic on the exhibition grounds in this city yesterday proved to be an unusual success. By mid-afternoon a large crowd from the two towns had gathered at the grounds and from that time on until a late hour in the evening there was maintained a round of amusement for the merry throng. Varied and interesting was the programme and some of the events brought out some really first-class track work.

The Strathcona band assisted to make the picnic still more enjoyable with a good programme of music. The ladies of the Roman Catholic churches who served the refreshments provided supper in the grove of trees at evening and in this line they surpassed even their previous high record in culinary circles.

After supper the main attractions were the baseball game and tug-of-war tournament. The latter event was one of the liveliest of the day and it was only after the most strenuous of battles that the Strathcona amalgamation team came out in the right place for the tug-of-war. There were four teams in the tournament, these being the "Amalgamationists," the "Fremonts," the "Lumberjacks," and the "Post Office" men.

Baseball Match

The baseball match was between the Strathcona and the Knights of Columbus, the former winning out by a score of 9 to 8. The personnel of the teams was:

Knights of Columbus—Grant, P.; Robinson, C.; Johnson, B.; Munson, 2B.; Brown, 3B.; La Fleche, 4B.; Robinson, 5B.; Domenech, CF.; Reagan, IF.

NORTH COUNTRY'S CHIEF NEED IS GOOD ROADS

"Not one third of the amount of money which should be spent on the improvements of northern roads, is being expended this year," said J. L. Cole, M.P., in conversation with the Capital this morning. Mr. Cole has just returned from the north where he has been surveying throughout the season. His farthest point north was Graveland. "Settlers are coming in in large numbers," said he this morning, "but are really in a desperate condition of some of the roads."

AGED MAN FOUND DEAD IN EAST END

WM. PARKS, CARPENTER, FALLS DOWN STAIRS AND BREAKS HIS NECK—IN CITY FOUR YEARS

About 8:30 this morning William Parks, carpenter, resident at 1210 Grierson street was found lying at the bottom of the stairs of his own home with his neck broken. The discovery was made by a neighbor. The police were immediately notified and Coroner Forin called to the scene of the accident. Dr. Forin decided that an inquest was unnecessary and that the man had fallen down the stairway striking his head on a step and breaking his neck.

William Parks was a Scotchman who had come from Nelson, B. C., to Edmonton about four years ago and had lived at his home on Grierson street most of the time since then. He is a carpenter by trade and has been doing job work about the city most of his time. Correspondence found on him indicates that he has a wife and family residing in Toronto. They will be notified at once. He is a Presbyterian but it is not known that he is a member of any local church. He was 67 years of age.

It was known when the accident occurred but it must have been either last night or Monday night because on Monday neighbors had seen him about his work.

A skeleton of a very large man was found recently by a farmer named W. G. Hamilton, near Morden, Manitoba. He was taken to Andrews on the road allowance at the time. The bones are evidently those of a white man, and have been found in a place where no knowledge of an accident that might be connected with them.

Lorimer Investigating Committee Will Resume Sitings in Washington Thursday

Attorneys for Each Side Have Been Busily Engaged for Past Two Weeks in Compiling Evidence—May Summon Members of Illinois State Legislature—Facts
Regarding $100,000 "Jack Pot" to be Brought Out

(International News Service)

Washington, July 12.—The Lorimer investigating committee will resume its sittings here tomorrow. It was originally thought that the committee would continue its hearings, either in Chicago or Springfield, but that plan was abandoned for several reasons. The members of the committee are disinclined to go on junketing trips. It can be added, and have deemed it would be better to bring witnesses here for examination than to go to Illinois and hear them. Then, too, there is the belief that the reciprocity tariff situation may break at any time in the Senate, and members desire to be here prepared to vote on these measures if the opportunity comes.

Gathering Evidence

During the past two weeks that the committee has been in recess, the attorneys for each side have been busily engaged in gathering evidence. Mr. Marble and Healy have been diligently searching after new evidence, and devising means for its substantiation. Whether or not this will be obtainable is something which is not disclosed. It is thought that the evidence with regard to this fund has been so vague and unsatisfactory that unless there is some further revelation, the matter by subsequent testimony, it is not likely to play an important part in the case. It is thought that if it existed, it is denied, it has not yet been connected with Lorimer's election.

Accounting System Unsatisfactory

Contending that the present system of accounting in the different municipal departments is far from satisfactory and greatly impairs the efficiency of much of the work now being done, City Auditor Richardson has prepared a statement which may be read at the meeting of commissioners this afternoon, urging that some steps be taken that will relieve the perplexing situation.

The system of accounting in vogue in the various city departments was inaugurated at the instance of City Commissioners Bouillon and Butchart last fall. Meantime the heads of departments and bookkeepers employed under them have experienced no end of trouble in trying to keep their work anywhere near up to the standard.

The city auditor says that if the system is not changed or something done to correct the present glaring imperfections he will be unable to complete his annual report by October 1. Other civic officials find themselves confronted with the same difficulties. Some of the departments have not been able to make a monthly report since the new system was started.

Former Naval Officer Who Stole $46,000 to Be Sentenced Today

PAYMASTER'S CLERK ON U. S. S. GEORGIA, WHO SKIPPED WITH MONTHLY PAY ROLL, FOUND GUILTY—HAD A METEORIC CAREER WITH MONEY

(International News Service)

San Francisco, July 12.—After a meteoric career which was marked by a series of successes and failures, a former naval officer, who had stolen $46,000 from the U. S. S. Georgia, was found guilty today by a federal jury in San Francisco. The man, who was named as the paymaster's clerk on the U. S. S. Georgia, was found guilty of stealing the monthly pay roll of the ship. He had a meteoric career with money, having been successful in many other ventures.

Getting Rid of Roll

Early in his wanderings he turned up in Atlanta, where in a few short days, he distributed sufficient money to make him known throughout the country. He presented a lady manuscript with a $1000 bank note for the pleasure of a company during a taxi ride and he disappeared from the scene. He was a mysterious individual by the name of W. M. Carlschlag, commander of the Georgia. He was a former naval officer, who had a meteoric career with money.

In "Canada and Her Colonies" Member for Alexandra Sets Out Alberta's Claims for Better Terms

PROVINCE NOW TREATED AS STEP DAUGHTER OF DOMINION

Wrongs Under Which Ireland Writhes Not a Circumstance to the Injustice Done by Autonomy Act—Eastern Provinces Control Their Own Resources and Ours as Well

In one of the most remarkable pieces of literature that has yet been added to the political hypothesis of the Dominion, a Bramley-Moore, member of the Alberta Legislature for the constituency of Alexandra sets out under the title of "Canada and Her Colonies" the whole story of the wrongs done to this province by the Autonomy Act and shows the immense damage which was worked against Alberta when she was deprived of her resources. By a most startling series of comparisons with the home rule question in Ireland, the revolt of the thirteen original states and the struggles of the old provinces from the time of the government the very control which Alberta is now denied from Ottawa, Mr. Bramley-Moore sets out the claims of this province as they have never been set out before and in such a forcible and comprehensive manner that to read the book is to be convinced that he has absolutely proved his point.

The purpose of getting "Canada and Her Colonies" into the hands of Albertans the capital has undertaken the handling of the issue, and a letter to the Capital enclosing one dollar covering the cost of the work will secure a copy. It is a text-book on the whole question of provincial rights which none who are at all interested in the public affairs of the province should be without.

The demand of the western provinces for full autonomy in the administration of their resources, and recognition by the Dominion government of those principles of freedom and devolution on which British civilization of the world over has been built up, is given considerable expression in "Canada and Her Colonies," by A. Bramley-Moore, M.P., recently published by W. Stewart and Co., of London, England. As its title implies, "Home Rule for Alberta" implies the book is mainly concerned with the question of the case for full provincial autonomy, and while the statistics which are laid before the reader relate to Alberta alone, the argument is one which applies with equally compelling force to the other disinherited provinces of Canada.

The book abounds in historic parallels and analogies, and an attempt is made to provide a philosophic basis for the theory of the author, that the

Delegates to Educational Convention Have Busy Day

Many Prominent Educators From All Parts of Continent Deliver Addresses—Citizens Do Not Appreciate Value of Schools

(International News Service)

San Francisco, July 12.—This was a busy day for the delegates to the convention of the National Educational association, in their separate meeting at the different sections gathered and heard addresses by distinguished specialists in educational problems. More than usual interest was manifested in the remarks of Dr. William Allen Brewster, of the University of Minnesota, who spoke on "Cooperation of Informal Education with the Public Schools." Dr. Allen declared that there is not a city in the country where the citizens do not aid in some way or other, but that in no one place are the citizens doing all the things that they could and should do for the betterment of the medium of instruction of their children.

"Among the reasons why schools as compared with private charities, social settlements, etc., have not had their full share of citizen cooperation, are: 1. School superintendents have not shown where citizens might take hold. 2. Citizens have too often asked for

Industrial Pavilion Now Being Erected on the Exhibition Grounds at a Cost Which Will Total Approximately $40,000

At a cost which is estimated will total in the neighborhood of $36,000, the Exhibition association is now erecting an industrial pavilion at the fair grounds which will be second to none in the west in point of appearance, capacity, and adaptability to the purposes to which such an edifice is devoted. This year only two wings will be erected, and about one-half of the space of completed building will be available for the manufacturers' exhibits which are to be shown at the fair in August of this year.

During their first building year directors of the association endeavored to put up buildings which would accommodate a good stock show and a race meet. This season an effort is being made to provide ample accommodation not only for local manufacturers and merchants, but also for a very large number of concerns whose headquarters are in various parts of the Dominion. The illustration given above shows the completed pavilion, only two wings of which will, however, be erected this year. Originally it was the intention of the directors to build only the south wing (shown at the right of the illustration), and this wing, costing $8,000, and in dimensions 100 by 115 feet, is now practically complete. So numerous were the entries during the early part of the season, that it became apparent that a second wing must be constructed if even one-half of the applicants for space were to be accommodated, and a few weeks ago this course was determined upon. Excavation has been commenced, and before the opening of the fair, the north wing, shown on the left in the cut, will have been erected and furnished, doubling the accommodation in the industrial section of the exhibition. Even this will be inadequate to meet the needs of all exhibitors. Every available inch of space has been taken up, and additional applications are coming in from day to day. Space under the grand stand will be requisitioned to accommodate a considerable number of the late applicants. The south wing of the industrial building will be almost entirely taken up by the exhibits of local industry, representing a total investment in Edmonton industry of considerably over $4,000,000.

The industrial building when complete will have a frontage of 305 feet, a depth of 100 feet with a wing at the back 100 feet wide by 115 in length. The central tower will be 20 feet in height. The situation of the pavilion has been admirably chosen, the structure being erected at the highest point of elevation on the grounds, and meeting the eye of the visitor as he comes along the roadway from the main gate. In the south wing, to be occupied by local manufacturers' exhibits this year, the roadway for exhibits is 200 feet. Between the front wall and the first passageway is a platform 15 feet in width. On the east side of the first passageway is another platform, 15 feet in width, a 20 foot passageway, and at the rear, another 15 foot platform. The exhibition frontage in the north wing is 560 feet. It is here that the spaces for stall-spaces are provided, the exhibits being lighted from above the 11 foot wall which passes round the building. These two wings will cost in the vicinity of $16,000. The upper portion of the central section will be reserved for an art gallery and exhibitions of ladies' work. The directors of the association are following out a definite policy, according to which they aim to give, first, ample accommodation for stock, second, for industrial exhibits, third, for farm machinery and outside exhibits of all kinds, and for art, ladies' work, and school children's work in turn.

In other words, suppose we have only earned five per cent, then the council is to add the price three per cent, per annum to the cost of the plant and mains. The books to be open to inspection at all times to the city, who would guarantee four and a half per cent on outlay. Then as soon as eight per cent is earned, and for over one per cent, dividend over eight per cent, the price to be reduced five per cent, per 1000. This is a great inducement to economy and good management, and gratifies the public as well, as they benefit in proportion as the company is prosperous. This is known in the English house of commons committee as the sliding scale. The city will, of course, have direct representation on the board, and all plans and specifications would come before them for approval. This system combines municipal ownership with the best company management and has great merit.

Third—a straight twenty-five year franchise without guarantee of interest power to purchase at fifteen per cent above.

Cost of Installing Plant. In discussing the matter with the aldermen Mr. Hughes, who represented Mr. Goates, said that the estimated cost of installing a gas plant was approximately $267,150 and area of distribution—meters and mains, with provision for future extension.

The men who would back such an enterprise are among some of the most prominent engineers and manufacturers in England, including, besides Mr. Hault and Mr. Goates, Samuel Gutter & Sons, gas boiler builders, Middlesbrough; H. C. Gibbons, gas meter manufacturer, London; W. Parkinson, gas meter manufacturer, London, and S. J. E. Spencer Bros., tube works, Birmingham.

Municipal Ownership. Before the committee of the whole concluded its session, Mayor Armstrong, Aldermen Grindley, McInnis, Lundy, and Gowan gathered close together and discussed in hot earnest tones a proposition to submit to the ratepayers the question of municipal ownership. Alderman Grindley opposed it while Dr. McInnis was in favor of such a move. Mayor Armstrong suggested that all three propositions, including municipal ownership, the model agreement and the Goates proposition, be submitted to a vote of the ratepayers at the same time.

Model Gas Agreement Rejected. Upon the council session being resumed Alderman Grindley at once moved that the model gas agreement be rejected, seconded by Alderman McInnis. Alderman Grindley opposed the motion and voted against it, as did Alderman Lundy. Before the motion was put Alderman McInnis said that if it carried he would move for a straight municipal ownership of gas, but he failed to get in a word of Alderman Lundy's motion to take up the first agreement with the International Heating and Lighting Company and have the public works committee bring in a report.

STRAWBERRIES CAN BE GROWN IN THIS PROVINCE. Parties who are of the opinion that strawberries cannot be grown in this province would have had all their doubts dispelled yesterday had they visited the Capital office when T. M. Merton, nurseryman on the Y road, Strathcona came into the office with a large dish of the luscious fruit, some of the berries being exceptionally large. He was taking them to the board of trade officers where they will be preserved in alcohol as an advertisement of what this section can do in the growing of this particular fruit.

Newton D. Baker, city solicitor of Cleveland, has formally announced his candidacy for mayor on the Democratic ticket. Mr. Baker was chosen by the late Tom L. Johnson as his political successor.

CITY COUNCIL REJECTS MODEL GAS AGREEMENT

Original Agreement With International Heating and Lighting Company to Be Amended and Submitted to Council—Ald. McInnis' Motion to Appoint Committee to Secure Data on Installation of Municipal Plant Fails to Receive Second.

As a result of last night's meeting of the city council, the question of installing a gas plant and distribution system in Edmonton is as far removed from settlement as ever, with little prospect of anything definite being done for some time to come. By a vote of five to two, the aldermen rejected the so-called model gas agreement drafted by Utilities Commissioner Baillon and accepted by C. S. Eaton in behalf of the International Heating and Lighting company. No action was taken on the proposition of John Goates, representing London manufacturers of gas machinery.

Immediately following the decisive turn down of the model gas agreement, Alderman Lundy moved that the agreement reached with the International Heating and Lighting company about two months ago and which passed a second reading in the council, be referred to the public works committee with the understanding that others be added to the committee, and that the agreement be re-drafted to meet the views of the council. The motion carried without a dissenting vote.

Alderman McInnis then moved that a committee composed of Aldermen Mould, McKimley and himself be appointed to look into the feasibility of establishing a municipal ownership gas plant but there no seconding and the motion was not put to the council.

System of Government Has Broken Down

Notwithstanding that one judge of the supreme court had already described in a lengthy judgment the procedure which should be followed in dismissing a commissioner, and that the council, guided by proper legal advice, had followed as closely as possible the procedure, a second injunction has been granted by another judge of the supreme court restraining certain members of the council from taking part in the consideration of the report of the investigation committee, and thereby making it impossible for the council to act upon the report of the investigation until this latest injunction is dissolved.

If, at the hearing on Tuesday next, Judge Simmons sends the application for this second injunction up for trial the case cannot get a hearing until the September sessions, and no action can be taken before that time.

Thus the affair resolves itself into the position that after wasting the best part of a year in an endeavor to dismiss a commissioner, the very controversy over whom proves that he is unfitted for the position, the council is now compelled to lose the balance of the building season or to carry on business over his head and in spite of his presence at the commission board.

Edmonton has now reached the stage in which so many municipalities in the United States find themselves, when, in answer to some plea, their representative bodies are divested of their powers by the courts. For the present situation there is possibly no precedent in Canada, but across the border the criticism which is most often levied is that the greatest abuse of the injunction is found in the fact that representatives of the public interests do not get the same consideration at the hands of the courts that the representatives of private interests would be likely to expect.

Speaking broadly, the purpose of an ex-parte injunction is to restrain some action through which it is apprehended a grievous wrong is about to be committed and the possibility of the consummation of which could not have been foreseen. In such a case the court is asked to intervene to prevent the injustice being done.

In the present instance we find that the applicant for the injunction rushes to the court at the very last moment and that, without the elected representatives of the ratepayers being asked to be present or to send legal representatives to show cause why the injunction should not be granted, the injunction is granted and the council restrained.

It could not possibly have been argued by the applicants that this eleventh-hour application was made necessary by some new and unforeseen developments. The whole question has been before the public for weeks, and the application, if it were not for the purpose of securing an order at the last moment to tie the council's hands, might just as well have been made a week or two weeks ago and the solicitors for the city have been notified to be present and have been given a chance to show cause why the order should not be granted, or to ask what warrant the applicant had to act on behalf of all the ratepayers of the city of Edmonton.

Resolved to its last analysis, the injunction means that a council duly elected with certain powers is restrained at the request of one ratepayer from exercising these powers, and to all intents and purposes the charter is suspended by order of the court, and representative municipal government abolished.

The system under which the municipality of the city of Edmonton has been governed has broken down. What the city needs first of all is a new system which will place the power to recall and dismiss in the hands of the ratepayers.

No Longer Necessary To Preach the Recall

While Mr. Bouillon and the council fight their differences out in the courts, the free and independent who pay for it all have no redress whatever.

No matter what happens in municipal affairs; no matter how bad the water may be; no matter if the street railway line in which the ratepayers have a million good hard dollars invested be allowed to run for months without a statement; no matter if the provision for the enlargement of the power plant be not made; no matter if the expert de corps of the whole brigade of municipal employees be wrecked by the boorishness of one man, the public must pay but cannot help themselves. There is nothing in the charter which gives them an opportunity to extract themselves from the situation.

There was a time once in the city of Edmonton when to preach the referendum and recall was to be dubbed a crank. Nowadays it is not even necessary to preach it. The present situation fairly huris the fact at all who have intelligence enough to catch it that they are not safe unless they retain in their own hands the control of the city's affairs.

Council on Record Against Municipal Ownership

At the city council last night, with all members except Alderman Hyndman present, Ald. Dr. McInnis made a motion that a committee be appointed to lead the cost of building a municipal gas plant and to bring in an estimate, the intention of the motion being that a by-law for a municipal gas plant might be placed before the ratepayers. Dr. McInnis' motion did not find a second. All the other members of the council are, therefore, on record as being opposed to even submitting a municipal ownership bylaw to the ratepayers.

Aldermen Gowan, Lundy, Mould, Miller and Grindley apparently want the original International agreement, and none other, put to a vote, and are unwilling to second any move which contemplates allowing the ratepayers to express an opinion on any other phase of the gas business.

Alderman McKinley, who has all along protested that he is in favor of municipal ownership, by failing to second Dr. McInnis' motion and by seeking to remodel the original agreement, relinquishes his position as a municipal ownership man and goes on record as being unwilling to give the ratepayers a chance to declare whether they are prepared to build a municipal gas plant or not.

When this International agreement comes up for a vote, if it ever does, the ratepayers will remember that, with the exception of two members, one of whom is away, all the aldermen are on record, not only as being opposed to public ownership, but as being against allowing the ratepayers to get public ownership if they want it.

With a bylaw submitted under such conditions, the franchise hunters can figure for themselves how much chance there is that the ratepayers will give the franchise away.

Where the West Is Hit Both Ways

Western Canada is probably the only country in the world in which industries cannot be fostered by protection but which, at the same time, is denied the benefits of free trade.

Speaking generally, those natural industries upon which the prosperity of the Canadian west depends seek their market not at home but abroad. A tariff, for instance, of one dollar a bushel would not add a cent to the price of wheat at Winnipeg or Edmonton, for the very simple reason that the price is fixed by the Liverpool market.

On the other hand, such commodities as overalls, plows, boots and shoes, or any of the staples which might be manufactured in the west cannot be helped by protection for the simple reason that every ounce of material included in their manufacture is taxed before it gets to the local manufacturer.

The effect of the tariff is therefore to make his material more expensive while at the same time it restricts his market by increasing the price which he must charge his customer.

JUST PARAGRAPHS.

It now transpires that Max Aitken's knighthood was a reward for his devotion to the Conservative cause in the old country. If the Conservatives over there are anything like they are in this country what Max should have received is the hero medal or an examination for sanity.

The cold wave which has been retarding vegetation slightly in the prairie provinces for some time past is lifting, while at the same time the heat wave from which the east suffered is dropping down to lower levels. Mr. Borden is en route east.

Toronto has 50,000 homes, of which less than 15,000 are electrically lighted. Some day the west will have to put a few millionaires in the field to civilize those eastern communities and lift them out of their present state of darkness.

"THIS IS MY BIRTHDAY"

Prince Louis of Monaco

Prince Louis, heir to the throne of Monaco, was born July 12, 1870, the son of Prince Albert, the present ruler. The mother of Prince Louis was Lady Mary Douglas Hamilton, to whom Prince Albert was married in 1869. Monaco is a small principality with an area of only eight square miles and is surrounded entirely by French territory excepting on the side towards the Mediterranean sea. The revenues are derived wholly from the famous gambling casino of Monte Carlo. Until a short time ago the Prince was an absolute ruler, there being no elective constitution. The people, however, are not entirely satisfied with the constitution and it is possible that Prince Louis may never become ruler of the principality. Yet, it is scarcely believed that popular antagonism will go to the length of a revolution, and it is expected that the will made in the constitution which will satisfy the people.

REFUSAL TO SECOND MOTION

DIRECT SLAP AT MUNICIPAL

Mayor Armstrong—"It's a mystery to me why Alderman McInnis' motion to appoint a committee to inquire into a municipal ownership proposition did not receive a second. It looks to me like a slap at municipal ownership, and still they call this a municipal ownership proposition. I don't believe a man could be elected to the council who was known to be opposed to municipal ownership. I can't see why there should be any objection to submitting the proposition to the people and let them decide. I don't believe for just a few years ago the city was in the hands of a few puppets and every one of them is on a pay-by-basis. Why should the city own its own gas plant?"

Alderman McInnis—"Notwithstanding the action or rather lack of action of the council last night in not backing up my motion to go into a municipal ownership proposition, I am not discouraged. I may have municipal ownership of gas yet. My idea in moving to appoint a committee was to look into the probable cost of a municipal plant and then submit a bylaw to the ratepayers. Let them decide."

Alderman Lundy—"I had no special reason for not seconding the motion of Alderman McInnis further than that we have already gone into this matter. About two months ago, I think it was, the city engineer furnished the council with an estimate of the cost, etc., of a municipal gas plant and distribution system. Therefore I don't see any good grounds for going into it again."

Alderman Gowan—"While I was not opposed to Alderman McInnis' motion it seemed to me that we should first clear up some of the propositions already being considered by the council. We should decide on something and not get too many irons in the fire all at once. I would be in favor of submitting the question to the people and their decision would be good enough for me."

Alderman Mould—"Yes, I had a special reason for not seconding Alderman McInnis' motion, but for the present I prefer not to state for publication what that reason is."

Alderman McKinley—"The only reason I had for not seconding the motion was that I considered the time inappropriate, at least at last night's meeting of the council. New developments in the local controversy had evidently left some of the aldermen in the best of humor, and I think at some future date, perhaps at the next meeting of the council, we could take this matter up with better grace. I am in favor of submitting the whole question to the ratepayers for final settlement."

PRINCE EDWARD TO BE FORMALLY INVESTED AS PRINCE OF WALES

reigning house of England.

The court yard and roads leading up to the castle are now being cleared of a sea of wooden stands draped in gay bunting that effectively hides from view the green fields and pastures. These seats it is estimated will contain more than twelve thousand spectators when the king and queen pass between them on their way to the royal quarters at the castle. Aside from the fortunate twelve thousand persons, 20,000 more will catch a glimpse of the ceremony from places of vantage on the walls and in the sky-ways.

Hour of Investiture

Half past two in the afternoon is the hour set for the investiture of the prince, but there will be plenty of time in the morning for it about 10 a.m. the king and queen will leave the royal yacht at Holyhead and entrain for Cardiff, the crossing station. Here they will be met by the royal guards and the royal retinue, and proceed in gorgeous procession to Cardiff Castle. The ceremony will be received by the mayor and corporation, who will present an address of welcome.

The king and queen will then proceed to the watergate where two main processions will be formed—that of the king and queen. From the watergate the king and queen will enter the ancient court yard of the castle itself and proceed in procession to the royal platform upon which a rich green pile carpet has been laid. Upon this platform the king and queen will stand for centuries past as seats for hundreds of England's sovereigns who have invested their heir apparent as Prince of Wales. Upon these the king and queen will take their seats and send for the prince who will also arrive in procession. Then the ceremony of investiture will begin.

The ceremony of investiture chosen for the present Prince of Wales is about three hundred years old, and snacks of the Stuart rather than the Plantagenet regime. According to this ceremonial the prince, upon arrival before his royal parents will make low obeisance three times, and after the third time, when he has come near to the king, he will kneel down upon a rich pillow while his letters patent are read. Then the king, reading the words of investiture, will put the robes upon him, drape on his sword and invest him with rod and ring, and set the cap and coronet of office upon his head. After this, the letters patent will be again read and delivered to the king, who, in turn, will hand it to the prince, and a fanfare of drums and trumpets. After this a religious ceremony will be conducted by the Bishop of Bangor and by a representative minister of the non-conformist churches. The king and queen will then proceed to Queen Eleanor's gateway and there present the prince to the people. This will be the culminating point of the ceremony. After the prince's presentation, the royal household, together with the great list of England's nobility who will attend the ceremony, will attend a naval review in Carnarvon Bay, which, except for the absence of the foreign fleets, will be fully as impressive as the royal review at Spithead. Three warships will act as an escort to the royal yacht, on which the queen will likely stay at Holyhead for the weekend.

What Will Modern Battlefield Be Like

ARMY OF MILLIONS WILL LIKELY BE ENGAGED IN NEXT EUROPEAN WAR—PROBABLY FIELD OF BATTLE WOULD NOT BE OVER FOUR MILES WIDE

Berlin, July 12.—The size of a modern battlefield has been the subject of discussion recently among German military experts who have been stimulated thereby by a new book by General Falkenhayn, one of the most eminent authorities on land war strategy. The conclusions of which the participants in this interesting discussion arrived at in this interrelated the amazing dimensions which a battlefield in a twentieth century war would assume.

General Falkenhayn discusses the hypothetical case of an army with a rival force of approximately the same numbers, and he says that the operations would extend over an area fully 200 miles from side to side and not less than 50 miles deep, that is from the front of the army to the rear of its camp.

But at the same time, he says, small in topographical warfare, for forces of this numerical strength took the field as long ago as the Franco-German campaign in 1870, since when marvelous developments in military matters have ensued.

In a struggle between two great European military powers, it is quite possible and indeed probable that each of the opposing forces would number something over three million troops, for Germany, France, Russia, and Austria-Hungary are all capable of sending such armies to the front without touching their respective last lines of reserves.

In a struggle between two great European military powers, it is quite possible and indeed probable that each of the opposing forces would number something over three million troops, for Germany, France, Russia, and Austria-Hungary are all capable of sending such armies to the front without touching their respective last lines of reserves.

When Prussia the Great fought his battles in the eighteenth century, the field of operations never exceeded more than four miles from side to side and in the Russo-Japanese war, owing to the great distance from the respective bases there were never more than three or four hundred thousand troops simultaneously in action; the battlefields remained limited in extent.

Superhuman Trick
Will the generals of the future be equal to the almost superhuman task of directing operations over such immense areas? Every army must have a commander-in-chief and the generalissimo must control the movements of all the troops united under his orders.

He will have all the latest technical devices at his disposal. Hundreds of miles of telegraph and telephone wires will be rapidly laid down in order that he may exchange orders and communications with his auxiliary officers. There will be motor cars and flying machines, dirigible airships and submarines, and the most modern apparatus for wireless telegraphy and telephony, besides other mechanical contrivances for signaling.

Will they suffice to surmount the purely technical difficulties involved in establishing effective communication over such an area, especially as they have to be installed and equipped for service in a very short space of time? And if they furnish a perfect communicating machine, will there be any human being capable of intelligently digesting the information supplied to him with bewildering speed?

Working out in his mind the profound, by complex problems connected with the movements of such legions of human enemies of war? Would Moltke, the greatest strategist of modern times, if he were alive, be able to handle armies of millions with the ease and clarity necessary for success? And the great armies created by the leading countries of Europe really efficient instruments of war or would the complicated machinery break down under the stress of actual hostilities?

Reports Discuss Problem
All these questions are occupying the minds of European experts, but only a very few supply conclusive reply to them. There is, however, a strong inclination among many competent military men to regard the countless legions of the great powers as inefficient because they are too big and unwieldy to handle with facility and because no human brain can surmount the difficulties of directing their movements with precision.

There would be plenty of other problems to solve besides those of generalship. The feeding of such vast legions of men would be a gigantic task. As the great army moved forward, something like 3,000 food bakeries would have to be constructed for use every day and as these are under ground and created by excavating earth, extensive areas of country would be heavily bombed by these holes involving much damage to landowners and farmers and danger to coal poles.

Some German authorities predict an abandonment of very great armies based on compulsory military service for every male adult in the country, and recourse to smaller armies of trained fighters. The comparatively few professional soldiers would be paid to fight the battles of the nation, as is the case in America and England. One thing is regarded as certain, if the great military powers of Europe and Asia do not abandon conscription and fall back on smaller armies of professional soldiers, then both America and England will be compelled as a matter of self-preservation to adopt conscription.

POLITICS AND POLITICIANS
With a State campaign in Kentucky and senatorial contests on in Virginia, North Carolina, Arkansas, Mississippi, Georgia and Louisiana, the South is furnishing the most of the hot-weather politics this year.

Among politicians in South Dakota it is rumored that Congressman Charles Burke may decide to enter the race for the United States senate to succeed Senator Granby, whose term will expire March 1, 1913.

Large municipal elections have been held in Seattle since the beginning of the present year and a fourth has been called for next September, when the issuance of more than $2,000,000 of municipal bonds will be submitted to the electors.

The senatorial contest is warming up in Virginia, where William A. Jones and Carter Glass, both members of the lower branch of Congress, are endeavoring to secure the seats of Senator Martin, the minority leader in the senate, and Senator Swanson, who is filling the unexpected term of the late Senator Daniel.

Will Close Pool Rooms All Night

RESTRICTIONS WILL BE PLACED ON THE OPERATIONS OF THE POOL ROOMS—BETTING MUST BE WIPED OFF PROGRAM AND CLOSE AT 11 O'CLOCK

Sweeping reforms in the management of pool rooms and betting areas in all the villages of the province, are to be enforced by the attorney-general, who will exercise the powers conferred upon him at the last session of the legislature, to provide regulations for the conduct of these places of recreation. The regulations, which will be put in force in the very near future, will be of the most comprehensive character, and will bring under the control of the attorney-general a department of business which has hitherto been carried on, in all communities other than incorporated towns, in cities without regulations of any kind.

At the present time the manager of a pool room or betting alley in any village of Alberta may keep his premises open to all hours of the night, and all night if he so desires. The new regulations will provide for the closing down of all recreation parlors between the hours of 11 p.m. and 8 a.m., and they will be closed from 11 o'clock on Saturday night until 8 o'clock on Monday morning.

The main event, between Jack Peterson, of the middle states, and Kid Sandow, of the coast, will be something worth seeing, if the records of the men speak truth. Both are husky looking boys and have trained hard. Sandow is young and quick, while Peterson is experienced and strong.

Peterson has a few pounds on Kid Sandow in weight, but the latter expects to overcome that by ability. The Kid looks forward to a victory.

—Some Remarks on Athletics in General—Picking an All Star Team to Meet the Corinthians

Mr. Boulton is a very important person and very much in the public eye in Edmonton, but there are very few people who ever thought that he was in any way connected with athletic sports. He is not directly connected with them but he has had a very important influence on the Lacrosse club. The Lacrosse club has a vice-president named McLellan. Mr. McLellan is superintendent of the city waterworks department. The waterworks department did not take up all of Mr. McLellan's time, but Mr. Boulton does. When Mr. McLellan accepted the position of vice president of the Lacrosse club he did not realize on Boulton. In short, the Lacrosse club has been hindered.

There were other reasons why the Lacrosse club has failed to be a success. The club has been hindered by the fact that the players were unable to secure grounds. For a time things looked very bright. The use of Diamond and the use of the ball court were secured. Mr. Gray was away at the same time and the permission was received from the city secretary.

The only reason why the Athletics are not at the top of the American League today is probably because Ed Collins was hurt a week or so ago. Collins was the mainstay of the Philadelphia Athletics and it was his unavailability that has caused the team to be defeated so often since.
